Abstract: Barbara Hogan joined the African National Congress (ANC) shortly after the 1976 Uprisings. Her responsibilities in the then underground movement were to mobilise the white political left, participation in public political campaigning and supplying the ANC underground in Botswana with information about trade union and community activity in South Africa. She was detained in 1982, and after being interrogated, ill-treated and held in solitary confinement for a year, she was found guilty of high treason and sentenced to 10 years in jail. She was released in 1990 and has continued to play a pivotal role in the ANC.

Introduction

The donor of this collection, Barbara Hogan, was born in 1952 in the small town of Benoni in the former Transvaal, now Gauteng Province. In an interview given to Michelle Friedman, Hogan explains that she hails from a white family that largely ignored the harsh and oppressive realities of Apartheid as they affected the lives of the country's black majority. It was only when she attended the University of the Witwatersrand (WITS) and got involved in the student protest politics of the day that she became aware of what the system of Apartheid entailed.

While at WITS Hogan participated in a march that was part of a campaign calling for the release of 22 persons kept in solitary confinement. She was detained.

Her detention and subsequent exposure to white leftist campus politics had a decided politicising effect on her. Hogan got involved in trade unionism and with community organisations. The response of the Apartheid state to the 1976 Uprisings and the death in police custody of Steve Biko led her to the realisation that sustained resistance to Apartheid was only possible if it additionally operated from an underground base.

Hence she joined the then outlawed African National Congress (ANC). Her responsibilities in the Movement were working towards winning over the white left, participating in public political campaigning and supplying the ANC underground in Botswana with information about the activities of trade unions and community organisations inside South Africa.

Hogan was detained in 1982 and, despite the fact that the only 'crime' that the Judiciary could attribute to her was 'furthering the aims of a banned organisation' after being interrogated, ill-treated and kept in solitary confinement for 1 year, Hogan was nonetheless found guilty of 'high treason' and sentenced to 10 years in gaol.

She was released in 1990 with the unbanning of outlawed political organisations and the release of political prisoners, most notably Nelson Mandela.

Upon her release Hogan played a pivotal role in the re-structuring of the ANC from an exiled liberation movement that operated internally from underground to a sustainable political party that was to lead a post-Apartheid South Africa to democracy. She did this in her capacity as general-secretary of the Pretoria-Witwatersrand-Vaal (PWV) branch of the ANC.

AL3013 - The Barbara Hogan Collection

The collection therefore documents in the main the processes of negotiating the end of Apartheid, the re-structuring of the ANC and preparing the country for its first democratic elections. The collection comprises the following discrete foci:

The suspension of the armed struggle and control of violence (Groote Schuur Minute)

The release of political prisoners and the question of indemnity (Pretoria Minute)

The National Peace Accord

Strategies, campaigns and conferences for a peaceful and negotiated end to Apartheid

Michelle Friedman, commissioned by the South African History Archive (SAHA), conducted a comprehensive interview with Barbara Hogan about the latter's imprisonment in 1982 and her experiences at the hands of the security police. The interview serves to complement this collection. It is accessible upon request under the collection number AL2933

The Convention for a Democratic South Africa (CODESA)

Publicity campaigns on issues relating to the tripartite alliance of the ANC/SACP/COSATU

Campaigns to end violence between hostel dwellers and township residents

Campaigns to normalise relations between the ANC and Inkatha

Campaign to popularise the ANC throughout the country

Patriotic Front conference

ANC Anniversary conferences

The relationship between the ANC and the United Democratic Front (UDF)

Notes on the Collection

The materials that make up this collection cover the operations of the PWV ANC branch for the period 1990 to 1994.

The materials are all paper-based documents. Posters have been removed from the collection and form part of the Poster Collection of the South African History Archive (SAHA).

Hogan served the new post-Apartheid Parliament of the Republic of South Africa as an ANC Member of Parliament and as the Chairperson of the Portfolio Committee on Finance. She was also a council member of the Robben Island Museum.

The records on the relationship between the ANC and the United Democratic Front (UDF) document the period 1985 - when a state of emergency was declared by the Apartheid government - and 1990 when outlawed oppositional movements were unbanned and Nelson Mandela was released.

An in-depth understanding of this period as well as the nature of the relationship between the ANC and the UDF can be reached by consulting the main UDF collection (AL 2431) that covers the period 1983 - 1991.

An inventory of this collection is available. 3 Two posters - 1. 'The Story of the Peace Accord' and 2. 'Female Political Prisoners: What are their Conditions?' - are part of the overall SAHA Poster Collection classified under the collection number AL 2446
